

What does Christ want from His Church?

By Tim Sweigart

Over the last several years many one-on-one conversations and group meetings about the ongoing vision and ministry of South Central Conference have surfaced a fundamental question, "What does Jesus really want from His church?" This has drawn me to Ephesians 4 :11-13.

I love the clear focus for the mission of the church found in these verses. We, as the church of Jesus Christ, are to be actively joining other Christ-followers in finding opportunities to be in relationship with those both inside and outside the walls of the places in which we worship. Christ demonstrated this by transforming lives, hanging out with even the outcasts of society. We often have strayed from transformative relationships, settling for a more subdued version of church. What would it look like if all the time spent on church business was invested in meeting the neighbors surrounding our places of worship?

My personal story of wrestling with this conviction begins a couple of years ago with a reevaluation of my daily priorities after reading a short book by Michael Frost, Surprise the World. Frost shares some basic life habits that reflect the message of Ephesians 4 (pictured below). To make them easy to remember,

Ephesians 4:11-13

So Christ himself gave the apostles, the prophets, the evangelists, the pastors and teachers, to equip his people for works of service, so that the body of Christ may be built up until we all reach unity in the faith and in the knowledge of the Son of God and become mature, attaining to the whole measure of the fullness of Christ.

Christians throughout the world have found renewed enthusiasm to share their faith using Michael Frost's BELLS model.

We BLESS people, both inside and outside the church.

We EAT together, sharing meals with believers and nonbelievers alike.

We LISTEN to the guidance and direction of the Holy Spirit as we engage with those around us.

We intimately LEARN Christ as our leader and model for making disciples.

We see ourselves as SENT by God to everywhere life takes us.

these habits form the word BELLS. In many ways, God is transforming the way I interact with those around me. Though not perfected, these simple and profound activities have become daily habits for me.

I confess that as moderator there are times I wonder if investing energies into the conference will really make a difference but I am not the one who measures that. I can, however, testify that my commitment to build stronger relationships with others and reflect on God's word has brought me much joy!

Executive Committee Activity

The conference Executive Committee has met three times since the last issue of the Messenger. Discussion and decisions have addressed the following:

- > Devoted an entire meeting to a joint session with Regional Conference Ministers, looking at structure and staffing options that can undergird the services provided to pastors and congregations
- > Received a report from a group known as Luke 5, looking at new areas of outreach and disciple making activities, including:
  - *Encourage pastors and leaders to take the APEST (Apostle, Prophet, Evangelist, Shepherd, Teacher) test to identify leadership gifts and how they can best be used in local contexts;
  - *Create a list of disciple making options to guide congregational ministry and outreach;
  - *Make maximum use of social media to share our stories.
- > Worked with possible organizational structure and staffing options to make the best use of available financial resources, including the expansion of the Administrative Assistant's time to provide the needed support services
- > Continued to relate to the leaders of the southern group of churches in south Texas (UCIM) in an effort to understand more fully what the pastors and lay leaders need to work effectively in border communities serving the needs of migrant populations
- > Provided financial support for the pastor/spouse retreat offered to the south Texas churches
- > Began the process of identifying participants in the annual assembly, scheduled for July 17-18 at a location yet to be determined
- > Received confirmation that the Kansas Leadership Center has awarded a grant jointly to South Central and Western District Conference pastors and others, for the fifth consecutive year.
